ABOUT THE PROGRAM

When you declare a major in International and Global Studies, you need to choose one of two concentrations: International Relations (for students especially interested in diplomacy and governance) and Global Issues (for students interested in a broad range of political, economic, and sociocultural issues). This is a flexible major that works well in conjunction with a second major or with a range of minors. To learn more, meet with the major faculty advisor, Professor Muir.

Anthropology and Interdisciplinary Programs Faculty Advisor
